Cinco de Mayo, the fifth of May, is the anniversary of the Battle of Puebla in the Franco-Mexican War in 1862.

The Mexicans won that battle, even though they were outnumbered 3-1. The victory boosted morale, but the war wasn't nearly over.

Fighting continued until 1867. If things had gone differently, Mexico could have ended up being a French speaking nation.

Historical events, trade and world travel all affect the language that people speak. So why not learn more Spanish and French?

To celebrate Cinco de Mayo, you can learn any of our languages for only $169.
