Art opening to feature music

MANDY MARKSTEINER
Special to the Monitor

Local harpist Sheila Schiferl will add another layer of meaning to "The Sacred Interdimension - Walking Between Two Worlds." The fine art exhibit, at Village Arts by Marilyn from 5:30-7 p.m. Friday, is all about creating art from a new perspective.

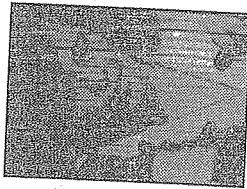

Schiferl will compose and improvise harp music that reflects the spirit of each piece of art. Her music will complement the work of Michelle Stump, who has created interdimensional artwork that captures the soul of sculpture by Craig Lehmann and Ede Ericson Cardell. The two-dimensional and three-dimensional works will be on display so viewers can see the transformation. Schiferl will prepare by walking around the pieces to see them from every angle.

Schiferl's involvement in a culturally rich evening doesn't end with the art exhibit. After she has finished playing she will cross the street to get to the Little Theater to act in the 10-minute play "Hoot" by Pat Beck.

In addition to playing harp and acting, Schiferl plays organ and directs the men's and women's choirs at San Juan Church in Ohkay Owingeh Pueblo. She has a private music studio and is now students. She can be accepting piano, voice, composition and harp harp@earthlink.com.
